

WINDSOR, Oct. 20.-Yesterday evening, Her MAJESTY and the Princess ELIZABETH arrived at the Castle.

Category: News

Full Text: Copyright 1816, The Times

WINDSOR, Oct. 20.—Yesterday evening, Her MAJESTY and the Princess ELIZABETH arrived at the Castle from London. After which, the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, who has been in attendance on the KING, as President of the QUEEN'S Council, during Her MAJESTY'S absence in London, left the Castle for his seat at Addington, in Surrey.

This morning, the Royal Family attended divine service in the private chapel in the Castle.

Yesterday the Duke of YORK transacted military business with the PRINCE REGENT at Carlton-house.

Among the company assembled at Carlton-house, to meet Prince GORTCHAKOFF (we beg pardon if we spell the name wrong, but really it puzzles us) were the Prince and Princess ESTERHAZY, the Duke De BOURBON, the Count and Countess LIEVEN, Count WITGENSTEIN, Count PALMELA, Count FERNAN NUNEZ, and several other distinguished foreigners; together with the usual sprinkling of the state officers of the household. In the course of the evening the Countess LIEVEN entertained the company with her performance of some pieces of sacred music on a pianoforte.

As the QUEEN was passing through Brentford on Tuesday last, one of Her Majesty's grooms rode over a poor girl, who, according to the report in the County Chronicle, was much hurt, and had three of her teeth knocked out.

We have authority to state, that the article from the Maine, dated October 3, purporting, that the King of WURTEMBERG had purchased for his menagerie a rhinoceros, for which he gave 18,000 florins, is entirely untrue, and to be numbered among the many contemptible fabrications spread by certain mischievous persons.

It is not true, says an evening paper, that the Queen of WURTEMBERG will come to England before winter: the journey will, it is supposed, be postponed till spring.

A mail from Flanders arrived yesterday morning. The Prince and Princess Royal of ORANGE seem to be making the tour of the principal places in the Netherlands. They made their entrance into Brussels on Thursday last. The most lively acclamations accompanied the procession.

Among the presents offered by the city of Amsterdam to the Princess Royal of the Low Countries is a lace gown valued at 225,000 francs.

A letter from Bapaume states, that the National Guard