1 Acknowledgment

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all zoos and institutions keeping greater one-horned rhinoceroses in providing me with the necessary information needed for updating the International Studbook 2014. All data until 31.12.2014 are included in this studbook.

On 31st of December 2014, 207 (105.100.2) animals were living in 73 zoological institutions worldwide. The age distribution is healthy, with 6.4 animals born in 2014.

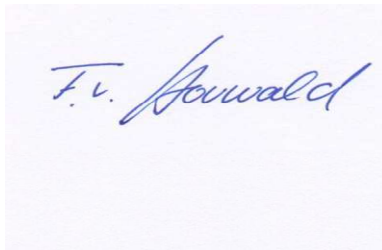

Despite the fact that 1215 poached rhino bodies were recovered in South Africa in 2014, Nepal has proven unique during the poaching crisis: the country has gone three years without losing a rhino to poachers. A new survey in Nepal counted 645 one-horned rhinos (Rhinoceros unicornis), up from 375 animals ten years ago and 534 animals in 2011. This represents a rise of 72 percent over the last ten years, an impressive feat given that the world's rhinos are facing a savage poaching crisis. In India, over 25 rhinos were poached, mainly in Kaziranga National Park.

2 Biological Data

Present distribution	India (Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh), Nepal
Population status	Vulnerable, CITES Appendix I
Habitat	Riverine grasslands of the Terai and Brahmaputra basins

Food

Greater one-horned rhinos feed predominantly on grass, but are known to consume a wide range of other plants, such as leaves, branches, shrubs, cultivated crops and fruits. In addition, the rhinos frequently visit areas rich in minerals.

Behaviour

Social groupings

Adult males and adult females without calves live mostly solitarily. Males defend loosely defined territories, which can overlap with territories of other males. The strongest male usually has the best food area. As territories depend strongly on the availability of food, they change during the different seasons.

A female and a calf stay together at least, until the calf reaches the age of 3 - 4 years. Female calves are tolerated for a longer period, whereas young bulls leave the mother and form loose 'boy groups'. Females wander loosely between the territories of the bulls and mate usually with the strongest one.

Short-term aggregations

The most common aggregations occur in mud wallows. As rhinos graze in the morning and afternoon, they use the hottest time of the day to submerge in wallows or water. At those places, rhinos seem to be more tolerant against each other. After wallowing they separate again. During the monsoon the water level is rising to extreme levels. Although adults as well as young animals are good swimmers, it often occurs that calves are separated from their mothers.

Reproduction

Birth weight in captivity:	64.5kg (44 - 91kg)
Gestation length in captivity:	479.1 days (425-496 days)
Oestrus cycle in captivity:	30-45 days
Interbirth interval in the wild:	34 - 50 months
Interbirth interval in captivity:	32.6 months
Sexual maturity:	Females: 4 – 6 years

Males: 7 - 10 years

First reproduction in captivity:

Male of known age: 6 years, 3 months, 24 days

Female: 4 years and 7 days

Mating takes place throughout the year (wild) and there is no specific calving season.

A calf drinks on average 20 - 30 litres of milk per day. The milk is very rich in lactose and low in fat. On average a calf gains 1 - 2kg weight per day. Calves suckle for a long period (up to 20 months) but do start feeding on roughage at an early age (3 months).

Sizes and weights

Body weight in the wild:

Up to 2000kg

Body weight in captivity:

Males: 1800 - 2300kg

Females: 1500 - 2100kg

Shoulder height in the wild:

150 - 180cm, with males being taller

Shoulder height in captivity:

Males up to 195cm, females up to 172cm

Head-body-length:

Between 3 -4m (with captive animals usually being taller and larger than wild animals).

Horn length in captivity:

Typically between 20 – 60cm

Longevity

Animals in captivity live on average up to 40 years, maximum recorded age is 45 years.

3 Status and Conservation

The greater one-horned rhinoceros is listed by the IUCN red list as vulnerable.

Currently they can be found in seven Indian National Parks and Wildlife Sanctuaries in Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh, as well as in two National Parks and one Wildlife Sanctuary in Nepal: Chitwan, Bardia and Suklaphanta.

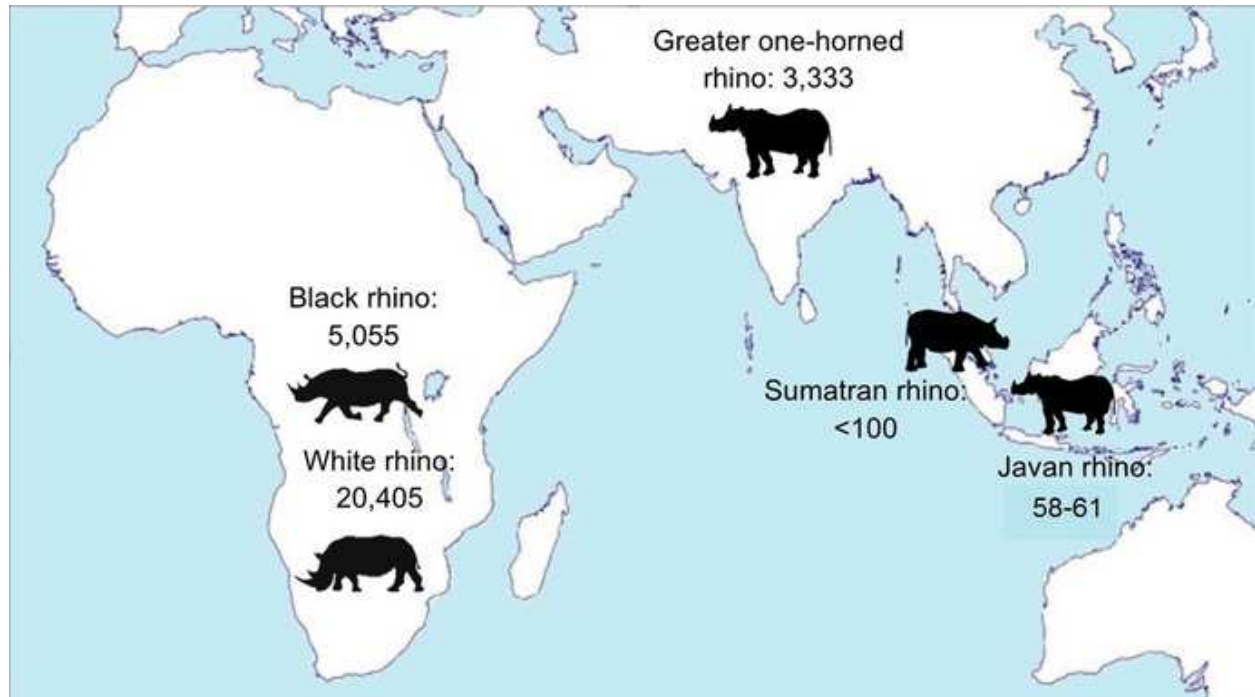

Current numbers (census in India 2012 / 2013) mention a few more than 2800 individuals and Nepal has just reported that 634 GOHs live in Nepal.

Despite rising numbers, the poaching threat for all rhino species continues. The following illustrations were taken from https://www.savetherhino.org/rhino\_info/poaching\_statistics

The graph below illustrates the dramatic rise in poaching numbers throughout the past years. The statistic refers to African rhinos only.

The map below shows the numbers of living rhinoceros species and it becomes clearly evident that the most threatened rhinoceros species are Asian rhinoceroses.

In contrast to all other rhinoceros species, the Indian or greater one-horned rhinoceros has done rather well. Excellent news came from Nepal, where the government has reported a further increase in the country's greater one-horned rhino population!

The new figures show that the rhino population in Nepal's Terai Arc Landscape has increased 21% in the past four years.

There are now 645 rhinos there, compared to the 2011 estimate of 534.

This means that Nepal's rhino population now stands the highest they've been since the early 1950's showing decades of conservation success for the species. (cited from https://www.savetherhino.org/latest\_news/news/1288\_rhino\_population\_increase\_in\_nepal)

The following information were obtained from the 2014 Year End Report from the International Rhino Foundation: <http://www.rhinos.org/annual-reports>

In 2014, only one greater one-horned rhino was killed in Assam's Manas National Park, bringing the number of rhinos killed in Manas to eight since reintroduction efforts began under Indian Rhino Vision 2020 in 2008. Ten calves were born during the same period. The last translocation, four rhinos from Kaziranga National Park, took place in March 2012, and several orphaned calves rescued by the Centre for Wildlife Rehabilitation and Conservation (CWRC) have been released to large enclosures within the park since that time. Due to a political insurgency movement, credited with poaching the last two animals lost, no additional translocations to Manas are planned until the situation subsides and security issues are resolved.

In November 2014, the Government of Assam, the IRF, WWF, the IUCN Conservation Breeding Specialist and Asian Rhino Specialist Groups convened a meeting in Guwahati, Assam, to develop population models for IRV 2020 to try to tackle the problem. The workshop was developed to review progress with IRV 2020 translocations to-date (a) discussing and determining the real numbers needed for the long-term success of the IRV 2020, taking into account our experience in Manas with poaching losses; (b) modeling predicted population growth rates and the numbers of rhinos needed to make translocations a success; and (c) discussing ways to ameliorate known threats as well as unforeseen events. The workshop focused primarily on Manas and Burachapori, but other areas also were discussed and modeled.

Manas is not the only area hit by poaching. The trend for poaching in Assam from 1985 – 2013 is not dissimilar to what we have seen in Africa during the same time frame, particular the recent escalation. Between 1985 and 1995, poaching in Assam was quite high, ranging between 52 – 24 cases per year. From 1995 until 2003, poaching leveled almost down to just 5 incidents. From 2003 onwards until today, numbers rose again up to 41 incidents in 2013.

Plans for Phase II of IRV 2020 are moving forward. At least six greater one-horned rhinos from Kaziranga NP will be moved to the Laokhowa-Burachapori Wildlife Sanctuary by the end of 2015 (this had to be delayed because of onset of the rainy season). IRV partners are approaching this translocation a bit differently; animals will spend at least 6 – 10 months in bomas at the release site before being released into the sanctuary. Boma construction is almost completed. As part of the preparation for the translocations, with funding from Save the Rhino, IRF has provided a grant to Aaranyak, an Assamese NGO, to create a small-grants program for small, local NGOs in the area to create community development, awareness, and livelihoods programs.

4. Demographic and Genetic Analysis

4.1. Demographic analysis

As of 31 December 2014, the International Studbook listed 207 (105.100.2) greater one-horned (GOH) or Indian rhinoceroses in 73 institutions.

Table 1 Distribution of the worldwide captive living population (living on 31.12.2014) of GOH

Total		105.100.2 (207)	73

	SSP	41.43 (84)	31

	Nepal	1.1 (2)	1
	Singapore	1.2 (3)	1
	Thailand	0.1 (1)	1
	China	1.0 (1)	1

The age structure, illustrated in Figure 1, of the captive greater one-horned rhinoceros population is healthy. There are almost as many males as females living with a slight bias towards males. At the end of 2014, a total of 105 males and 100 females were living. In the past years, an almost even number of males and females have been born.

The graph clearly shows a continuous rise of the population. The number of males and females is almost equal.

The slight seasonality in birth may be attributed to the difficult time for some zoos in allowing their rhinos to mate during winter.

It illustrates the onset of fecundity (females can start at the age of 3 -4 years, males at the age of 6-7) and the end of fecundity (females stop at the age of around 30, males almost 10years later).

It supports the figure earlier and highlights the peak of reproduction between the age of 4 / 8 (females / males) and 16 / 20 (females / males).

It can be noticed that the mortality rate of the first 30 days stands at 19% (including both sexes). Comparing data from 2011 with data from 2014, it can be noticed that this mortality rate has decreased from 22,7% to 19%. Research in this matter is necessary as it is assumed that mainly behavioural aspects and animal management play an important role.

In general it can be said that there are no major death rates recorded apart from the above mentioned juvenile mortality. The average age of zoo Indian rhinos ranges for females at 22 years ( $L_x = 0.5$ ) and males at 18 years ( $L_x = 0.5$ ).
