

THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—The long and anxiously expected rhinoceros has at last safely arrived at the Zoological Gardens from Domraon. He appears none the worse for his long march, and looks very comfortable in his new abode. Every week adds fresh attraction to the garden in the shape of some new and interesting specimens, and the collection is by degrees assuming proportions worthy of the capital of India, though with more aid from the public much more might be accomplished.—/d.