

A REPORTE OF THE KING

dome of CONGO, a Region of AFRICA.
And of the Countries that border
rounde about the same.

1. Wherein is also shewed that the two Zones, Torrida & Frigida, are not only habitable, but inhabited, and very temperate, contrary to the opinion of the olde Philofophers.
2. That the blacke colour which is in the skinnes of the Ethiopians & Negroes &c. proceedeth not from the Sunne.
3. And that the Riuer Nilus springeth not out of the mountains of the Moone, as hath beene heretofore beleued: Together with the true cause of the ryfing and increafe thereof.
4. Besides the description of diuers plantes, Fishes and Beastes, that are founde in those Countries,

Drawen out of the writings and discourfes of Odoardo Lopes a Portingall, by Philippo Pigafetta.

Translated out of Italian by Abraham Hartwell.

LONDON
Printed by Iohn Wolfe. 1597.

feeding: they vse to shake and roote vp the great trees with the force of their shoulders, and strength of their whole backs: But the smaller trees they take between both their teeth, and so bowe them and plucke them downe, that they may feede vpon the leaues of them: insomuch as sometimes they breake one of their teeth with so doing. And this is the cause why you shall find diuers of them in the fieldes that haue lost their teeth. They chaw their meate with their short teeth, which are not seene as their two long tuskes are: and they carry it to their mouth by their long Snout, or Tronke, which is to them in steed of an arme & a hand. The tip of their Tronke is fashioned & diuided into little flits, and (as it were) fingers, wherewith they will take vp very small thinges, as Nuttes, and Strawes, and Berries, & so reach them to their mouth, as I Philippo Pigafetta haue seene my selfe at Lisbone.

The Shee-
Elephant.

The Females of these creatures doe beare their broode in their wombe for the space of two yeares and no more: And forasmuch as the younge Elephant cannot so quickly bee brought vp, (for it groweth very slowly) the milke is kept from it, and so it waxeth apt to feede of it selfe. And therefore Mother Nature hath provided that the Elephants are not great with young, but from seauen yeares to seauen yeares.

The Elephant
skinned.

Their skinned is harde beyond all credite. For being fower fingers thicke, it cannot bee pearced, no not with the shot of an Arcubuse. And Signor Odoardo reported, that with a little Gunne, which is called a Paviera, one of them was stricken, without any wound making, but indeede he was grievously bruised, so that he ranne away from that place all in a rage, the space of three three daies journey and there died, after hee had slaine certaine slaues that he met by the way.

The manner of taking the Elephant.

The people of that Countrey haue nor the skill to tame these beastes. Whereby they might reape great commodity and profite, for carrying their stuffe from place to place for diuerse other good vses. But yet they take them; by digging certaine deepe trenches in the places, where they vse to pasture, which trenches are very narrowe at the bottome, and broade aboue, to the end the beast may not help himselfe, & leape out when he is fallen into them. These trenches they couer with Soddes of earth, and grasse, and leaues, because the beast shoulde not see their traine, but passing ouer them remaine there entrenched. Whereupon the Gentleman beforenamed tolde mee, that hee had seene with his owne eyes a very straunge and admirable thing in Coanla, namely, that a younge Elephant following his damme fell downe by chaunce into one of these pittes, and after that shee coulde not with all her skill and strength drawe him out of it, she buried him therein, and couered him with earth, with branches, and with bowes, insomuch as she filled the pit vp to the toppe, to the end that the hunters shoulde not enioy her calfe, choosung rather to kill it her selfe, then to leaue it to the mercie of the cruell huntsmen. This louing and kind mother, not fearing the people (that stood round about her, & shouted against her, & threatened her with sundry weapons, & vttered straunge clamours and noyses to affray her, & cast many fiers at her) but assuring her selfe in her owne stronge and valiant nature, did labour and toyle from morning till night, that she might draw her calfe out of the pitte: and when shee founde that

A strange effect of Nature.

it was not possible for her to achieve what she desired; then shee couered it in manner as we haue tolde you.

The nature of the Elephant.

The Elephant is a very gentle beast, and trusteth greatly in his natural strength. He feareth nothing, nor hurteth any man that doth not trouble him: and haun- recth neere to mens houses without doing any harme at all. If he espie men that go in his walke, he will not med- dle with them, vnlesse they seeke to molest him: sauing that sometimes peraduenture hee will gently with his snowte hoysse them vpwardes into the ayre, whom he directeth withall in his way, and that is all the hurt hee will doo vnto them. These Elephants doo greatly de- light in waters: and if a man be desirous to see them, his best way is to lie somewherenigh to the Rivers, and Lakes, where they vse to haunt about noone tide, to drinke, to refresh themselves, and to bathe their bodies in the water: for there they will stande vp to their bel- lies, and all the rest of their bodie; that is aboue the wa- ter, they will walk all ouer with the water that they snuffe vp into their snout for that purpose. And be- cause there are so many foords & pastures (as is said) in the kingdome of Congo; therefore is there very great store of these creatures in that countrey. For Signor O- doardo affirmed, that in the way betwene Cazanze, & Loanda, in a little grassie valley hee had seene about a hundred of them in a company, olde and young that followed their dammes: and these were the first young ones that euer hee saw till that day. And herewithall you must vnderstand, that they vse togö together in heardes, as Kine, and Camelles, and other such like gen- tle Creatures doo, and not alone like Lions and other such wilde beastes. Now the reason why this countrey

aboundeth

aboundeth so in Iuory, is easy to be yeelded. For so many Elephants being bredde in that Region, they made no account of that commodity in times past: but onely af- ter that the Portingalles began to trafficke with those countreyes, it grewe in estimation: and so hauing ga- thered together in so many ages an infinite quantity thereof, which they found in their fieldes, they haue found them till this day at a very good penniworth.

It is not known, whether there be in that countrey Rinoceros, any other beast that is so big as an Elephant is, nor whe- ther there breed therein any Rinoceros, which is a Crea- ture as bigge indeede as the Elephant, and in India is cal- led a Bada. But yet there are brought into the countries of the Anzichi some of their hornes that growe vpon their noses, that are both of great value & estimation, & also vsed for the help of diuers diseases. So that it is very credible and likely, that there are some of them to bee founde in those quarters.

There are in the Region of the Anzichi Lions also, like the Lions that breed in other partes of the worlde, Lions. but they doo not vse to haunt the Region of Bamba: But in Bamba there are very great store of Tigres, which are of the very same shape that those in Florence are, which Signor Odoardo saw there, and testified to be Tigres. very Tigres indeed. He tolde mee also of a notable cus- tomewhich they haue: And that is, that they will not set vpon any men that are white, but onely such as are blacke: And it hath beene found, that when the white and the blacke haue slept together in the night time, they haue slayne the blacke to deuoure them, and sparr- ed the white. When they are hungry they will bee so bolde as to fetch cattell euen out of the yardes that are

K