37. BRIEF ENCOUNTER

A dangerous and exciting moment in which the rhino quickly swung around on its haunches when the elephant put on speed and headed straight towards it.

It has often been noticed that though the rhino and elephant tolerate each other, they are never on friendly terms.

When they meet, the rhino—as in this case—usually gives a few snorts and holds his ground for a short space of time, but he is invariably the first to move off.

39. EARLY MORNING WALK.

It is in the early morning that lions normally step it out, sometimes for several miles, to find a suitable place where they can lie up in comfort for most of the day.
