1 Acknowledgements

I would like to express my thanks to all zoos and institutions keeping Greater One-horned rhinos in providing me with the necessary information to write the International Studbook 2009. All data until 31.12.2009 are included in this studbook.

This year, I was fortunate to receive the information of the Indian National Studbook for Greater One-horned rhinos from the Central Zoo Authority, India:

Srivastav, A. and Nigam, P. 2010: Indian National Studbook of One-horned rhinoceros (Rhinoceros unicornis), Wildlife Institute of India, Dehradun and Central Zoo Authority, New Delhi.

This information was very important for the update of the demographic and genetic analysis, which has last been done in 2006. Anyone interested in receiving this studbook is invited to contact me.

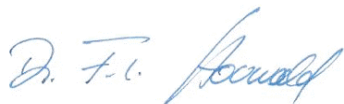

This studbook lists 66 institutions worldwide, keeping 172 (86 / 86) Greater One-horned rhinos by the end of 2009.

A genetic and demographic analysis was performed and compared with the data from 2006.

Thanks also go to Bibhab Talukdar, chair of the IUCN Asian Rhino Specialist Group, who provided me with the information of the latest status report for Asian Rhinos.

Despite the fact that the numbers of wild Indian rhinos are rather stable, it is worrying to see that poaching activities have increased. This is not only the case for all the Asian rhino species, but also for the African rhinos. Conservation activities are more important than ever, so are all activities of zoological gardens to keep and breed rhinos and to inform their visitors of the necessity to protect rhinos in the wild.

I would like to take this chance to express my thanks especially to all people working in the field for their tremendous efforts to save rhinos as well as to all zoos supporting rhino conservation!

2 Biological Data

Present distribution:	India (Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh), Nepal
Population status:	Vulnerable, CITES Appendix I
Habitat:	Riverine grasslands of the Terai and Brahmaputra basins

Food

Greater One-horned rhinos feed predominantly on grass, but are known to consume a wide range of other plants, such as leaves, branches, shrub, cultivated crops and fruits. In addition, the rhinos frequently visit areas rich in minerals.

Behaviour

Social Groupings

Adult males and adult females without calves live mostly solitarily. Males defend loosely defined territories, which can overlap with territories of other males. The strongest male usually has the best / rich in food area. As territories depend strongly on the availability of food, they change during the different season.

A female and a calf stay together at least until the calf reach the age of 3 – 4 years. Female calves are tolerated for a longer period, whereas young bull leave the mother and form loose 'boy groups'. Females wander loosely between the territories of the bull and mate usually with the strongest one.

Short-term aggregations

The most common aggregations occur in mud wallows. As rhinos graze in the morning and afternoon, they use the hottest time of the day to submerge in wallows or water. At those places rhinos seem to be more tolerant against each other. After wallowing they separate again.

Reproduction

Birth weight in captivity:	64.5 kg (44 - 91 kg)
Gestation length in captivity:	479.1 days (425-496 days)
Oestrus cycle in captivity:	30-78 days (in general around 40 days)
Interbirth interval in the wild:	34 - 51 months
Interbirth interval in captivity:	32.6 months
Sexual maturity:	females 5 - 7 years males 8 – 10 years
First reproduction in captivity:	male of known age: 6 years, 3 months and 24 days female: 4 years and 7 days

Mating takes place throughout the year (wild and captivity) and there is no specific calving season.

A calf drinks on average 20 – 30 litres of milk per day. The milk is very rich in lactose and low in fat. On average a calf gains 1 – 2 kg weight per day. Calves suckle for a long period (up to 20 months) but do start feeding on roughage at early age (3 months).

Sizes and weights

Body weight in the wild:	up to 2000 kg
Body weight in captivity:	males: 1800 - 2500 kg, females: 1500 - 2100 kg
Shoulder height in the wild:	150 – 180cm, with the males being taller
in captivity:	males up to 195 cm, females up to 172 cm
Head-body-length:	between 3 - 4m (with captive animals usually being taller and larger than wild animals)
Horn length in captivity:	typically between 20 - 60cm

Longevity

The wild-caught males with studbook nos 302, 10 and 289, whose birth dates are not precisely known, died at the estimated ages of 46 years, 43 years and 42 years respectively.

The wild-caught female no. 21, with unknown birth date, died at the estimated age of 45 years. The female no. 29, Jaypuri, was born on 10 July 1963 and died on 9 January 2004 at the age of 40 years, 6 months and 11 days at Zoo Gulf Breeze, Florida.

3 Species Status

The Greater One-horned rhinoceros has been classified by the IUCN Red List recently as vulnerable and is listed in CITES Appendix I.

Due to successful conservation strategies the populations are rising in some areas. Currently around 2800 Greater One-horned rhinos live in Nepal and India.

The latest report from the Asian Rhino Specialist Group states the following numbers (Bibhab Kumar Talukdar: Asian Rhino Specialist report, Pachyderm No 46 July – December 2009):

INDIA 2348

State of Assam

Kaziranga NP	2048

NEPAL 433

Despite rather stable numbers, poaching has become a severe threat for the population in Assam, mainly Kaziranga. In the last 4 years, 55 rhinos were poached in Kaziranga alone. In 2010, 6 rhinos have already been poached.

4 Demographic and Genetic Analysis

4.1 Demographic analysis

As of 31 December 2009, the International Studbook listed 172 (86/86) Greater One-horned or Indian rhinoceroses in 66 institutions.

The age structure is healthy. Compared to the analysis of 2006, more young males have been born. The sex ratio is equal (86 males and 86 females).

The reason for the considerable number of new potential founders and potential founders that died since the last analysis is due to the fact that for the first time, a regional studbook for the captive population in India was received and the information for many zoos in India could be updated.

The following table was taken from the new Indian National Studbook (Srivastav, A. and Nigam, P. 2010: Indian National Studbook of One horned rhinoceros (Rhinoceros unicornis):

Of the total 60 founders, 21 have not yet reproduced and are unlikely to do so in the future. Some of the 39 founders who have reproduced are very well represented, such as the numbers 5, 7, 18, 24, 77, 76, 190. The 39 founders are thus very unequally represented; however, to maintain a healthy and viable captive population and high gene diversity, it is vital to aim for an equal representation of founders.

With regard to the thirteen male founders that have not bred yet, it is interesting to notice that one male lives in Europe, one male in the US, one in Japan, nine in India and one in Nepal.

As far as the eight female founders are concerned that have not yet bred, three live in Europe, one in Thailand, one in Japan, two in India and one in Nepal. Of those eight females, six are likely to be of an age beyond reproductive success. The females in Vienna and Tokyotama are of great interest as they are both still young.

The number of Indian rhinos in zoological gardens is rising.

Since 2006, the number of founders has remained the same but there was a change of individuals (this is mostly due to the new information from the Indian National Studbook for One-horned rhinoceroses, 2009). There has been a slight increase in the gene diversity and founder genome equivalents. At the same time, the founder genomes surviving, the average inbreeding coefficient and the average mean kinship have slightly decreased since 2006. In general, the genetic parameters have thus remained fairly stable since 2006.

To maintain and improve the genetic quality of the captive population, it is vital to breed with the potential founders and the underrepresented founders as well as their offspring.
