1 Acknowledgements

I would like to express my thanks to all zoos and institutions keeping Greater one-horned rhinos in providing me with the necessary information I needed to update the International Studbook 2010. All data until 31.12.2010 are included in this studbook.

This studbook lists a total of 440 (241.198.1) Greater one-horned rhinos (GOH). On 31st of December 2010, 188 (95.93) animals were living in 69 zoological institutions worldwide. At the end of 2010 the distribution of Greater one-horned rhinos is the following:

Europe

22 EAZA (EEP) zoos hold 58 (26.32) GOH

North America (including one zoo in Australia)

26 AZA (SSP) zoos hold 75 (38.37) GOH

Asia

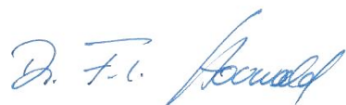

India	13 zoos keep	37 (22.15) GOH
Japan	3 zoos keep	8 (5.3) GOH
Nepal	1 zoo keeps	2 (1.1) GOH
China	1 zoo keeps	1 (1.0) GOH
Singapore	1 zoo keeps	3 (1.2) GOH
Thailand	1 zoo keeps	1 (0.1) GOH
Pakistan	1 wildlife Park keeps	2 (1.1) GOH

Despite the fact that the numbers of wild Greater one-horned rhinoceros (as well as wild African Rhinos) are rather stable and are growing, it is worrying to see that poaching activities have increased tremendously.

Most rhino horns are destined for Southeast Asian medicinal markets that are believed to be driving the poaching epidemic. In particular Vietnamese nationals have been repeatedly implicated in rhino crimes in South Africa. An ongoing myth, created by a Vietnamese minister, claims that rhino horn can cure cancer, which triggers the demand.

Conservation activities are more important than ever, so are all activities of zoological gardens to keep and breed rhinos and to inform their visitors of the necessity to protect rhinos in the wild.

I would like to take this chance to express my thanks especially to the people working in the field for their tremendous efforts to protect rhinos as well as to all zoos supporting rhino conservation!

2 Biological Data

Present distribution:	India (Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh), Nepal
Population status:	Vulnerable, CITES Appendix I
Habitat:	Riverine grasslands of the Terai and Brahmaputra basins

Food

Greater One-horned rhinos feed predominantly on grass, but are known to consume a wide range of other plants, such as leaves, branches, shrubs, cultivated crops and fruits. In addition, the rhinos frequently visit areas rich in minerals.

Behaviour

Social Groupings

Adult males and adult females without calves live mostly solitarily. Males defend loosely defined territories, which can overlap with territories of other males. The strongest male usually has the best food area. As territories depend strongly on the availability of food, they change during the different seasons.

A female and a calf stay together at least until the calf reaches the age of 3 – 4 years. Female calves are tolerated for a longer period, whereas young bulls leave the mother and form loose 'boy groups'. Females wander loosely between the territories of the bull and mate usually with the strongest one.

Short-term aggregations

The most common aggregations occur in mud wallows. As rhinos graze in the morning and afternoon, they use the hottest time of the day to submerge in wallows or water. At those places rhinos seem to be more tolerant against each other. After wallowing they separate again.

Reproduction

Birth weight in captivity:	64.5 kg (44 - 91 kg)
Gestation length in captivity:	479.1 days (425-496 days)
Oestrus cycle in captivity:	30-78 days (in general around 40 days)
Interbirth interval in the wild:	34 - 51 months
Interbirth interval in captivity:	32.6 months
Sexual maturity:	females 4 - 6 years males 7 - 10 years
First reproduction in captivity:	male of known age: 6 years, 3 months and 24 days female: 4 years and 7 days

Mating takes place throughout the year (wild and captivity) and there is no specific calving season.

A calf drinks on average 20 – 30 litres of milk per day. The milk is very rich in lactose and low in fat. On average a calf gains 1 – 2 kg weight per day. Calves suckle for a long period (up to 20 months) but do start feeding on roughage at an early age (3 months).

Sizes and weights

Body weight in the wild:	up to 2000 kg
Body weight in captivity:	males: 1800 - 2500 kg, females: 1500 - 2100 kg
Shoulder height in the wild:	150 – 180cm, with the males being taller
Shoulder height in captivity:	males up to 195 cm, females up to 172 cm
Head-body-length:	between 3 - 4m (with captive animals usually being taller and larger than wild animals)
Horn length in captivity:	typically between 20 - 60cm

Longevity

The wild-caught males with studbook nos 302, 10 and 289, whose birth dates are not precisely known, died at the estimated ages of 46 years, 43 years and 42 years respectively.

The wild-caught female no. 21, with unknown birth date, died at the estimated age of 45 years. The female no. 29, Jaypuri, was born on 10 July 1963 and died on 9 January 2004 at the age of 40 years, 6 months and 11 days at Zoo Gulf Breeze, Florida.

3 Status and Conservation

The Greater one-horned rhinoceros has been classified by the IUCN Red List recently as vulnerable and is listed in CITES Appendix I.

Due to successful conservation strategies the populations are rising in some areas. Currently over 2800 Greater one-horned rhinos live in Nepal and India. A recent survey in Nepal revealed that the numbers in Nepal have gone up due to effective management and protection strategies. Nevertheless, poaching is a continued threat to the Greater one-horned rhinos as their horn is regarded to be more valuable than the horn of African rhinos. In 2010, the African Rhinos were badly hit by well organised poaching gangs. More than 300 rhinos were poached.

It is feared that this trend will continue and that the Asian rhinos, primarily the Greater one-horned rhinos will be targeted.

Nepal as well as India have well organised conservation activities in place to protect the Greater one-horned rhino. In Nepal, the Department of National Parks and Wildlife Conservation is working in close cooperation with the National Trust for Nature Conservation (NTNC), Zoological Society of London (ZSL), WWF Nepal and the Darwin Initiative to set up a strategy to protect the Greater one-horned rhino in Nepal.

In India, the Indian Rhino Vision 2020 (IRV 2020) has been highly active since over 6 years and has managed in close cooperation with the International Rhino Foundation (IRF), the Assam Forest Department and WWF India the population in Assam. Both projects are to some degree already supported by European and American zoos but they need continued support to ensure the long-term survival of the species, especially with the threat of poaching knocking on the door.

Any zoo interested may please contact the studbook keeper for further information.
