1 Acknowledgements

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all zoos and institutions keeping Greater One-horned rhinoceroses in providing me with the necessary information needed for updating the International Studbook 2011. All data until 31.12.2011 are included in this studbook.

This studbook lists a total of 449 (246.202.1) Greater One-horned rhinos (GOH). On 31st of December 2011, 189 (97.92) animals were living in 70 zoological institutions worldwide. At the end of 2011 the distribution of Greater One-horned rhinoceroses is the following:

Europe

EAZA (EEP)	22 zoos	59	(26.33) GOH

The number of wild caught Greater One-horned rhinoceros in captivity has not changed much over the last years. This report includes a demographic as well as a genetic analysis.

Regarding the wild rhino population, there has been only one country with good news. Nepal is the only country where no poaching occurred during the year 2011 thanks to thorough protection.

Unfortunately, the poaching crisis is still going on and hit a highpoint in Africa last year. The numbers from the few months in 2012 clearly show that the crisis has not come to an end at all and that support for rhino conservation projects is more needed than ever. All activities of zoological gardens to keep and breed rhinos are very positive, even more if zoos manage to inform their visitors of the necessity to protect rhinos in the wild and set an example by supporting rhino conservation field projects as well.

I would like to take this chance to express my sincere thanks especially to all people working in the field for their tremendous efforts to protect rhinos as well as to all zoos supporting rhino conservation!

2 Biological Data

Present distribution	India (Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh), Nepal
Population status	Vulnerable, CITES Appendix I
Habitat	Riverine grasslands of the Terai and Brahmaputra basins

Food

Greater One-horned rhinos feed predominantly on grass, but are known to consume a wide range of other plants, such as leaves, branches, shrubs, cultivated crops and fruits. In addition, the rhinos frequently visit areas rich in minerals.

Behaviour

Social groupings

Adult males and adult females without calves live mostly solitarily. Males defend loosely defined territories, which can overlap with territories of other males. The strongest male usually has the best food area. As territories depend strongly on the availability of food, they change during the different seasons.

A female and a calf stay together at least, until the calf reaches the age of 3 – 4 years. Female calves are tolerated for a longer period, whereas young bulls leave the mother and form loose 'boy groups'. Females wander loosely between the territories of the bulls and mate usually with the strongest one.

Short-term aggregations

The most common aggregations occur in mud wallows. As rhinos graze in the morning and afternoon, they use the hottest time of the day to submerge in wallows or water. At those places, rhinos seem to be more tolerant against each other. After wallowing they separate again. During the monsoon the water level is rising to extreme levels. Although adults as well as young animals are good swimmers, it often occurs that calves are separated from their mothers.

Reproduction

Birth weight in captivity:	64.5kg (44 - 91kg)
Gestation length in captivity:	479.1 days (425-496 days)
Oestrus cycle in captivity:	30-45 days
Interbirth interval in the wild:	34 - 50 months
Interbirth interval in captivity:	32.6 months
Sexual maturity:	Females: 4 – 6 years Males: 7 – 10 years
First reproduction in captivity:	Male of known age: 6 years, 3 months, 24 days Female: 4 years and 7 days

Mating takes place throughout the year (wild and captivity) and there is no specific calving season.

A calf drinks on average 20 – 30 litres of milk per day. The milk is very rich in lactose and low in fat. On average a calf gains 1 – 2kg weight per day. Calves suckle for a long period (up to 20 months) but do start feeding on roughage at an early age (3 months).

Sizes and weights

Body weight in the wild:	Up to 2000kg
Body weight in captivity:	Males: 1800 - 2300kg
Females:	1500 - 2100kg
Shoulder height in the wild:	150 – 180cm, with males being taller
Shoulder height in captivity:	Males up to 195cm, females up to 172cm
Head-body-length:	Between 3 -4m (with captive animals usually being taller and larger than wild animals).
Horn length in captivity:	Typically between 20 – 60cm

Longevity

Animals in captivity live on average up to 40 years.

3 Species Status

The Greater One-horned rhinoceros (GOH) has been classified by the IUCN Red List as vulnerable and is listed in CITES Appendix I.

Due to successful conservation strategies the populations are rising in most areas.

Currently over 2900 Greater One-horned rhinos live in Nepal and India. A recent survey in Nepal revealed that the numbers in Nepal have gone up due to effective management and protection strategies. Also Assam has recorded a growth in their rhino population.

Nevertheless, poaching is a continued threat to the Greater One-horned rhinos as their horn is regarded as being more valuable than the horn of African rhinos. In 2011, the African rhinos were badly hit by well organised poaching gangs. 448 rhinos were poached in 2011 and the trend for 2012 looks dire.

It is feared that this horrible trend will continue and that the Asian rhinos, in particular the Greater One-horned rhinos will be targeted.

The Indian Rhino Vision 2020, a joint conservation project between the Assam forest department, WWF India and the International Rhino Foundation, set its target to have 3000 GOHs by the year 2020 in Assam. All major Parks in Assam (Kaziranga, Pabitora, Orang) recorded a healthy growth rate in the past years.

During the year 2011 and the first month in 2012 several translocations of GOHs from Pobitora WS and Kaziranga NP to Manas NP took place. Manas NP now has 22 GOHs. It is envisaged under IRV 2020 to translocate GOHs also to former rhino areas, such as Laokhowa and Bura Chapori Wildlife sanctuaries.

4 Demographic and Genetic Analysis

4.1 Demographic analysis

As of 31 December 2011, the International Studbook listed 189 (97.92) Greater One-horned or Indian rhinoceroses in 70 institutions.

Table 1 shows the distribution of the living population (living on 31.12.2011) worldwide

Region			N	Nr. institutions
Total			97.91 (188)	70
	Europe		26.33 (59)	22
		EEP	26.33 (59)	22
	SSP		37.35 (72)	27
		N. America	36.34 (70)	26
		Australia	1.1 (2)	1
	Asia		33.24 (57)	21
		India	24.16 (40)	13
		Japan	5.3 (8)	3

The age structure, illustrated in Figure 1, of the captive Greater One-horned rhinoceros population is healthy. There are almost as many males as females living with a slight bias towards males. At the end of 2011, a total of 97 males and 92 were living. In the past years, an almost even number of males and females have been born.

Figures 2-5 (starting top left) age-specific rates of fecundity (Mx), reproductive value (Vx), mortality (Qx) and survivorship (Lx).

Figure 2 (top left) is showing the age-specific rates of fecundity (Mx). It illustrates the onset of fecundity (females can start at the age of 3 -4 years, males at the age of 6-7) and the end of fecundity (females stop at the age of around 30, males almost 10years later).

Figure 4 (lower left) shows the mortality (Qx) rate in Indian rhinos. It can be noticed that the mortality rate of the first 30days is rather high with 22,7% (including both sexes). Research in this matter is still necessary as it is assumed that also behavioural aspects and animal management might play an important role.

The last figure (lower right) shows the survivorship (Lx). In general it can be said that there are no major death rates recorded apart from the above mentioned juvenile mortality. The average age of zoo Indian rhinos ranges for females and males around 40 - 45 years.

4.2 Genetic analysis

4.2.1 Founder representation

Table 1 and 2 highlight the fact that not all founders of the international Greater One-horned rhinoceros population have bred. Some animals have never bred at all and are now either dead or beyond reproductive age, other founders have distributed their genes to a very high degree.

Table 1 Number of living descendants of all founders (dead and living)

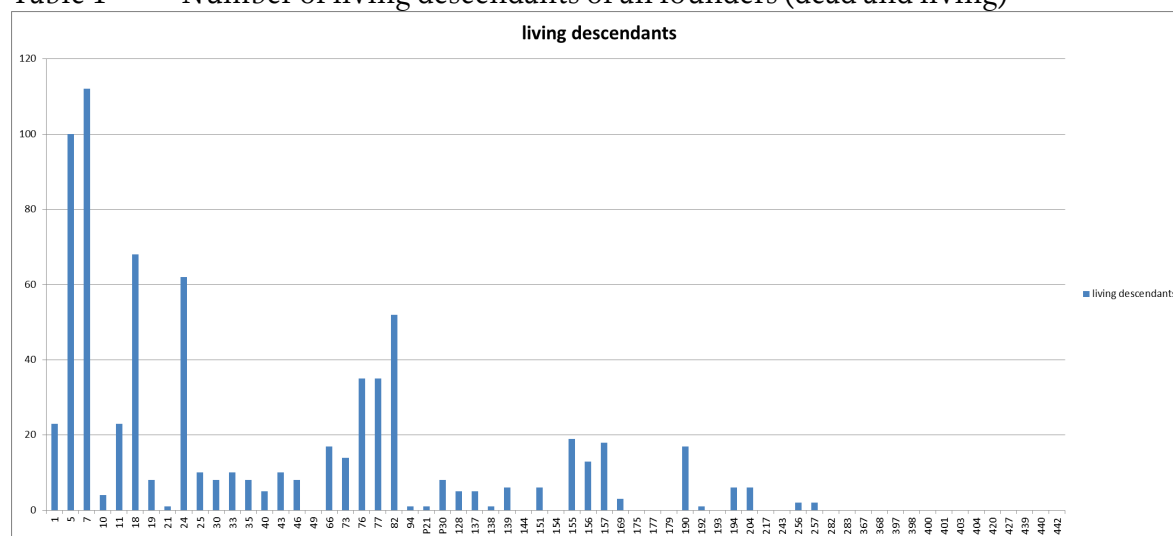

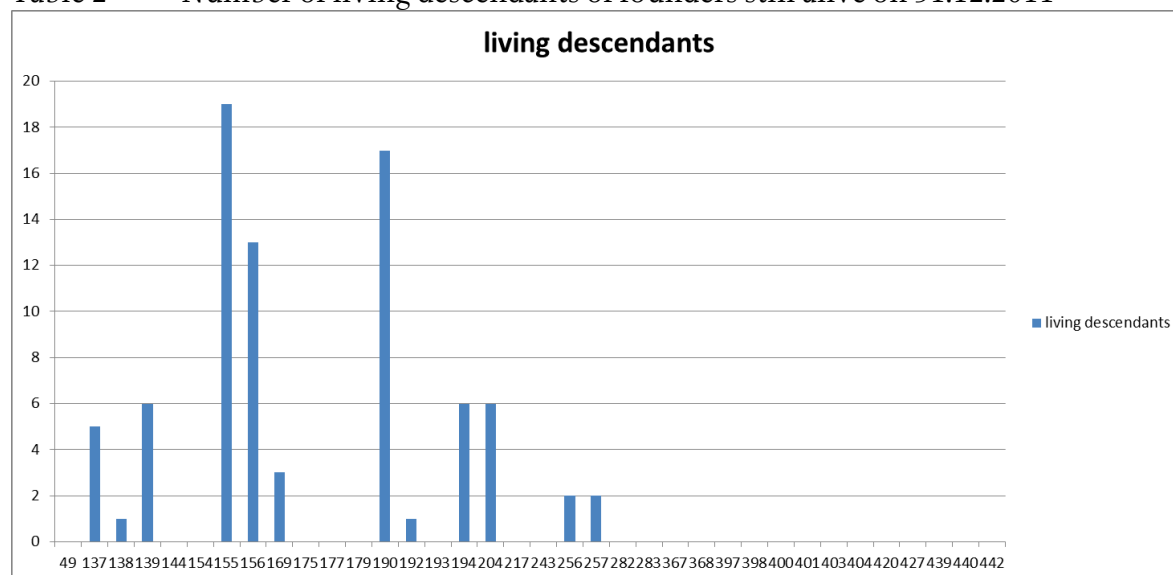

Table 2 Number of living descendants of founders still alive on 31.12.2011

4.2.2 Founder representation by country

Table 3 Founder representation by country

	Global	EEP	SSP	India	Japan	Nepal	Thailand
Living Founders	32	7 (1.6)	4 (1.3)	16 (11.5)	2 (1.1)	2 (1.1)	1 (0.1)
Reproduced		3 (0.3)	4 (1.3)	4 (2.2)	-	-	-

Table 3 and the following list explain the situation of the potential founders a little bit more. There are currently 7 (1.6) founders in the EEP, all coming originally from Nepal. Only the females with stbnr 204, 256 and 257 have successfully bred so far. The SSP has 4 (1.3) founders (all originating from Nepal) of which all have successfully bred in captivity. In India 16 (11.5) founders are living in zoological gardens. Unfortunately, only 4 (2.2) (stbnr 155, 156, 169 and 192) have bred successfully. The main breeder in India is still Patna, having had 3 births in 2011! Unfortunately, most other zoos in India are in a non-breeding situation keeping either solitary males or single sex groups. The reporting from Indian zoos still remains a challenge, so most data from India for this current studbook rely either on newspaper articles or on the data before 2011, when an India produced an own Rhino Studbook. The only animal in Thailand is a wild caught female. Being at the age of 34, she is not suitable for breeding anymore. Two interesting founders of young age are in Japan. It will be interesting to follow the development there in the coming years. In Nepal, two wild rhinos live in Kathmandu zoo. Giving the age of the female, it is likely that she will soon be beyond breeding age.

4.2.3 Genetic summary

Founder: A founder is an individual obtained from a (often) wild population that has no known relationship to any other individuals living in the descendant population, except for its own descendants (see tables 1 and 2). The Greater one-horned rhinoceros captive population has currently 35 living founders, of which not all are still capable of breeding (see above list of studbook numbers).

% Genetic diversity (current / potential): 95,49 % / 99,05%.

This number describes the % of gene diversity of the source population (here the wild population) currently retained in the living descendant population of the ISB: Analysis from the studbook reveals that there are currently 152.00 living descendants from the founders.

The mean inbreeding factor (F) of 0,0481 describes the average of the inbreeding coefficients of the living descendants.

The mean kinship (mk) is the average relatedness between an individual and all other individuals in the living descendent population. The more common the genes of the animal, the more related it will be to everyone else in the population, and the higher its mean kinship. If the value is zero, the animal is not related to any other living animal in the population.

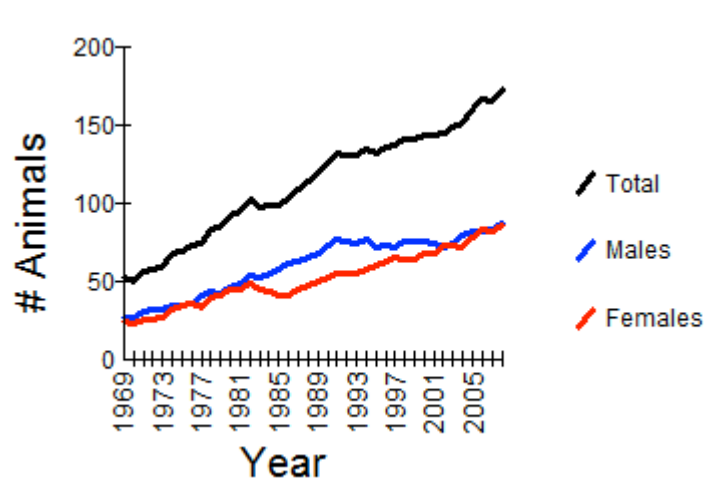

Figure 2 shows animals by birth type. Over the past decades, the population has been rising and the birth rate of males and females has been very stable during the past years. Looking at the total annual rise, the increase is not large at all, but given the fact that most zoos are only capable of keeping 1.1 or 1.2 animals in a breeding situation, one has to remember that it might even become very difficult to place more offspring in case a large number of offspring would be born each year.
