1 Acknowledgment

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all zoos and institutions keeping greater one-horned rhinoceroses in providing me with the necessary information needed for updating the International Studbook 2015. All data until 31.12.2015 are included in this studbook.

On 31st of December 2015, 215 (113.100.2) animals were living in 77 zoological institutions worldwide. The age distribution is healthy, with 7.1 animals born in 2015. 1.2 (3) animals died during 2015 and 11.8 (19) animals were moved between zoos / safari parks.

In 2015, 1338 rhinos were poached across Africa. This statistic has been compiled by the IUCN AfRSG at its last meeting in spring 2016 and more information can be found under: <http://www.iucn.org/content/iucn-reports-deepening-rhino-poaching-crisis-africa> .

When looking at the poaching statistics for greater one-horned rhinoceroses, Nepal has proven unique during the poaching crisis: the country has not lost a rhino to poachers in 2015. And thanks to professional anti-poaching activities, less GOHs were poached in Assam compared to 2014. All efforts are currently under way to translocate more rhinos from Kaziranga NP to other protected areas under the umbrella of the Indian Rhino Vision 2020, led by the International Rhino Foundation (IRF <http://rhinos.org/where-we-work/indian-rhino-vision-2020/>).

2 Biological Data

Present distribution	India (Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh), Nepal
Population status	Vulnerable, CITES Appendix I
Habitat	Riverine grasslands of the Terai and Brahmaputra basins

Food

Greater one-horned rhinos feed predominantly on grass, but are known to consume a wide range of other plants, such as leaves, branches, shrubs, cultivated crops and fruits. In addition, the rhinos frequently visit areas rich in minerals.

Behaviour

Social groupings

Adult males and adult females without calves live mostly solitarily. Males defend loosely defined territories, which can overlap with territories of other males. The strongest male usually has the best food area. As territories depend strongly on the availability of food, they change during the different seasons.

A female and a calf stay together at least, until the calf reaches the age of 3 – 4 years. Female calves are tolerated for a longer period, whereas young bulls leave the mother and form loose 'boy groups'. Females wander loosely between the territories of the bulls and mate usually with the strongest one.

Short-term aggregations

The most common aggregations occur in mud wallows. As rhinos graze in the morning and afternoon, they use the hottest time of the day to submerge in wallows or water. At those places, rhinos seem to be more tolerant against each other. After wallowing they separate again. During the monsoon the water level is rising to extreme levels. Although adults as well as young animals are good swimmers, it often occurs that calves are separated from their mothers.

Reproduction

Birth weight in captivity:	64.5kg (44 - 91kg)
Gestation length in captivity:	479.1 days (425-496 days)
Oestrus cycle in captivity:	30-45 days
Interbirth interval in the wild:	34 - 50 months
Interbirth interval in captivity:	32.6 months
Sexual maturity:	Females: 4 – 6 years

	Males: 7 – 10 years
First reproduction in captivity:	Male of known age: 6 years, 3 months, 24 days
	Female: 4 years and 7 days

Mating takes place throughout the year (wild) and there is no specific calving season.

A calf drinks on average 20 – 30 litres of milk per day. The milk is very rich in lactose and low in fat. On average a calf gains 1 – 2 kg weight per day. Calves suckle for a long period (up to 20 months) but do start feeding on roughage at an early age (3 months).

Sizes and weights

Body weight in the wild:	Up to 2000kg
Body weight in captivity:	Males: 1800 - 2300kg
	Females: 1500 - 2100kg
Shoulder height in the wild:	150 – 180cm, with males being taller
Shoulder height in captivity:	Males up to 195cm, females up to 172cm
Head-body-length:	Between 3 -4m (with captive animals usually being taller and larger than wild animals).
Horn length in captivity:	Typically between 20 – 60cm

Longevity

Animals in captivity live on average up to 45 years.

3 Status and Conservation

The greater one-horned rhinoceros is listed by the IUCN red list as vulnerable.

Currently they can be found in seven Indian National Parks and Wildlife Sanctuaries in Assam, West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh, as well as in two National Parks and one Wildlife Sanctuary in Nepal: Chitwan, Bardia and Suklaphanta.

The International Rhino Foundation (IRF), highly active in the management and conservation of the wild greater one-horned populations in India, mentions the following numbers on their homepage

<http://rhinos.org/state-of-the-rhino/> :

The greater one-horned rhino population now numbers more than 3,345 animals in India and Nepal. More than 2,625 rhinos are found in Kaziranga, Manas and Orang National Parks, and the Pobitora Wildlife Sanctuary in India's state of Assam. More than 280 individuals also live in protected areas in Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal, and more than 640 greater one-horned rhinos remain in Nepal. Poaching is still a problem in Assam, where 20 animals were killed in 2015, a decrease from 30 animals poached in 2014. In Nepal, thanks to army protection, no animals have been poached since 2014 - a tremendous achievement!

In Europe the following zoos have started in 2015 with keeping greater one-horned rhinos:

Bayramogl	Faruk Yalcin Zoo, Turkey
Fota	Fota Wildlife Park, Ireland
Guerno	Parc animalier et botanique de Branféré, France

In North America, no new zoo has started to keep GOHs

In Asia, one new park received a male GOH. It has to be noticed that this move was carried out without the permission and recommendation of the SSP.

Guangzhou	Guangzhou Zoo, China
