

THE GRAPHIC

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

THE ENTIRE CONTENTS OF THIS PAPER BOTH ILLUSTRATIONS AND LETTERPRESS, ARE COPYRIGHT

No. 2720. VOL. CV.
Registered as a Newspaper.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 1922

[PRICE ONE SHILLING
By Post, 1s. 1½d.

The Prince in a Tiger Hunt

During his week's holiday in Nepal, the home of the Ghurkhas, on the southern slopes of the Himalayas, the Prince of Wales devoted himself to big game hunting in the great forests of the country, and shot his first tiger and rhinoceros, both very fine specimens. He is here seen in the howdah that King George used during his visit in 1911, keenly on the watch for a tiger to break cover.

Image © Illustrated London News Group. Image created courtesy of THE BRITISH LIBRARY BOARD.

THE PRINCE AS BIG GAME HUNTER

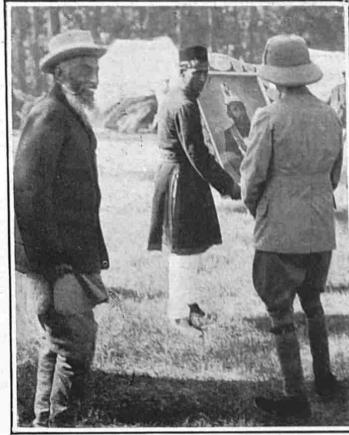

ON THE TRACK OF THE TIGER IN THE JUNGLES OF NEPAL

INSPECTING A GUARD OF HONOUR of Nepalese troops on the Nepal frontier.

THE PRINCE'S FIRST TIGER—A BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN
From left: Lt. Cromer, Sir L. Halsey, the Prince, Lt. L. Mountbatten, Col. Morgan.

RECEIVING A PORTRAIT OF HIS HOST
the Ruler of Nepal (seen smiling on left).

THE "KILL": THE HUNTERS—THE PRINCE ON THE THIRD ELEPHANT FROM RIGHT—GATHERED ROUND THEIR QUARRY

During his week's big game hunting as the guest of the Maharaja dhiraja of Nepal, the Prince of Wales and his party had splendid sport in the forests. Not only did the Prince kill his first tiger and first rhinoceros, but he had the exciting experience of hunting other beasts of prey such as leopards and bears. Although the visit was a private one, it appears that not fewer than fifteen tigers and seven rhinoceroses were bagged. His Royal Highness received as a gift an interesting collection of live animals, which will, no doubt, in due course, be seen at the Zoological Gardens in London.