

Rinocerontes / Rhinos

A medida que he ido publicando posts sobre la imagen del rinoceronte en el arte y la cultura en general, las cosas han evolucionado considerablemente. Con el tiempo he ido acumulando una importante muestra de cómo la imagen de estos animales ha sido representada según la visión de infinidad de artistas y creadores a lo largo del tiempo.

Más de una vez me han sugerido separar la serie en un blog monográfico, pero por el momento, y por varias razones, seguirá siendo parte de este. No obstante, he decidido incorporar este índice para todos aquellos especialmente interesados en el tema, con enlaces directos a todos los posts de la serie y los nombres de los artistas publicados.

Para más información sobre estos animales desde el punto de vista zoológico, me remito a las abundantes fuentes que pueden encontrarse en la red, y en cuanto a un análisis más en profundidad sobre la representación, sugiero una visita al concienzudo desarrollo que ofrece Mafa Alborés en el apartado dedicado al tema en su sitio "La voz del animal invisible" bajo el título "Iconografía del rinoceronte".

As I have been publishing posts on rhino image in art and culture in general, things have evolved considerably. Over time I have accumulated a large sample of how the image of these animals have been represented in the view of many artists and creators over time.

More than once friends have suggested separating the series in a monographic blog, but for the moment, and for various reasons, will continue to be part of this one. However, I decided to incorporate this index for those particularly interested in the subject, with direct links to all the post of the series and the names of artists published.

For more information about these animals from the zoological point of view, I refer to the abundant sources that can be found on the Net, and in terms of deeper analysis of the issue of representation I suggest a visit to the conscientious development provided by Mafa Albores in the section about this topic in his site (in Spanish) "The Voice of the Invisible Animal" under the title "Iconography of the Rhinoceros".
